The

white folks. gave a dance one night, Way down in Ten - nes - see, To white folks feet be - gan to move, They all be - gan to sway. Old learn the fa - mous Tan - go Rag and steps from o'er the sea. The John - son sure was on the job with his big band that day. He or - ches - tra be - gan to play a tune that sound - ed tame, When filled them full of "Nig - ger Gin" to bring forth har - mo - ny, And some-one, in the crowd yelled out, "For Law's sake, stop that strain, And Wag-ner's cel - e - bra - ted tunes ne'er held such mel - o - dy. The send for John-son's band, A tru - ly band what am, They band was there for test. There was no time to rest; They don't need notes, it's in their throats Out to their feet and hands."

closed their eyes and hyp - no - tized the notes to do their best.

Chorus. Not too fast.

Hear — that cor - net talk - ing, Hear — that trom - bone snort - ing, As the band is get - ting un - der way. —

Lead - er John - son's ly - ing back in his chair, —

Horn in the air, — Don't seem to care, — Oh such har - mo - ny you nev - er heard be - fore! A slip - pry feel - ing comes a steal - ing When those notes, they come a peal - ing

From that Ban - dan - a Band, Way down in Dix - ie - land. Hear land.
